Broken

She moves about
Like a broken doll
Pieced together
With wrong parts
Here
And there
And yet
Somehow
She excites me
As if her bones rubbing
Were like flint sparking
On wood
And I think of her
Impaled
Like Frida Kahlo
Glitter
Covering her body
A horrible vision
Of ethereal
Mutilation

Adrienne Lee

Adrienne Lee is a student at The University of South Alabama in Mobile, Alabama where she currently works in the reference department of the University Library. She is married to a human but remains madly in love with her miniature dachshund who can shut doors, give you a high five and also fight crime in his spare time. Her poetry has recently appeared in the Comrades e-zine.
